THE MISTAKES OF THE PAST

NOW A TEACHING LESSON LEARNED FROM FAILURES

The Growth of the Fighting Machine Constituted by the Army Has Been Little Short of Marvelous, and All Resources of The Empire Have Been Mobilized for Supreme Effort

Ed. J. Ryan, correspondent of the United Press in London, reviews the year 1916 as follows:

John Bull spent a goodly portion of 1916 expending his forces in the trenches of the Western Front.

From the Dardanelles to Mesopotamia, from Africa to the East, from the North to the South, in all directions, the British Empire has been mobilized for the supreme effort. The growth of the fighting machine constituted by the army has been little short of marvelous, and all resources of the Empire have been mobilized for the supreme effort.

More Men Are Needed

The London Times Military Writer Issues a Warning

The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. "We ought to see," the correspondent writes, "clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter."

Referring to the imputation "with which the British have been charged," the writer says: "The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

The offensive develops upon in order that we may beat the enemy from the territories of our allies and gain the superiority that we need to win the war. The writer declares that there is a crying need for more men. "There has been a great remission in the creation of new divisions along the front," he says. "The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

Little less than miraculous has been the development of the machine of war in the last year. From the start, Britain has been the treasury of the allies. The general staff of the British army has been the most efficient in the world. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

Drum Came True

Young Lady in a Dream Saw Her Future

One of the most vivid stories of the war is that of a young lady who dreamed that she saw her future. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

Russia's Untold Wealth

The Savings of Russian People Under the Yoke of the Revolution

"Lord Robert Cecil has presented the House of Commons with the savings of the Russian people up to April, 1915, as the latest figures available," the London Times military correspondent writes. "The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

Jack's Wit and Wits

In a certain hospital "somewhere in France," one of the nurses, before the war, was a very popular girl. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

Edith Cavell Statue

The Statue of the Heroine of the Trenches

The Edith Cavell statue, which is being completed, will be dedicated to the heroine of the trenches. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

British Boy's Fate

In Island Fortress

Heligoland's British Boy, who is being held in a fortress, is the subject of a story. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

How the Plan of Two Interested German Officers Nearly Succeeded

An Ingenious Method of Escape

An ingenious method of escape was employed by two German officers who were held in a fortress. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. 'We ought to see,' the correspondent writes, 'clearly enough how that our efforts on land and especially on the western front have not been adequate to secure a decision, even to deter.'"

THE BASIS ON WHICH THE FIGHTING IS FOR

TO KEEP INTACT THE HOHNZOLLERN DYNASTY

When the German People Finally Realize They Are Not Fighting For the Freedom of Germany, but Their Own Continued Political Submission, a Reaction May Be Expected

It is a very interesting study to see how the German people are being misled by the Hohenzollern dynasty. The London Times military correspondent maintains that the proportion of the fighting machine to the peace time population is not sufficient. He says that Germany did not wait for a reply to her peace offer, but continued to supply men and munitions. TERMS CASH NO RESERVEC. F. DAMRON, AUCTIONEER

H. Wesserling and J. T. Richardson, Owners

NOTE—You are cordially invited to attend this sale, and we feel sure that this offering will please anyone who wants to buy good stuff. Keep these facts in mind—The Horses are all good heavy stuff, in fine condition, and are ready for the spring work, having been in harness almost every day this winter. The Cows are in excellent condition, and are all due to calve in March and April. Some of them will probably be fresh by sale day. A part of the implements were bought new last season, and the rest are infirst class condition. If you are a buyer for a good heavy team of horses, or want a few good young milch cows, you will arrange to attend this sale.

First Annual Horse Sale at Lacombe

The first annual horse sale to be held by the Lacombe Agricultural Society will be held in the fair grounds on Thursday March, 22nd.

Entries are solicited, and we are sure that this sale will be a success and an annual event of great importance to the farmers and horse breeders of this district.

Good heavy mares and geldings are in good demand, and we especially solicit that kind of horses for the first sale.

This sale will be properly advertised throughout the Western provinces, and we expect to attract plenty of outside competition.

The following rules subject to amendment will apply.

Every horse listed for this sale must be guaranteed as represented by the owner.

There shall be no reserve and no by-bidding.

Terms of sale shall be cash.

Every horse entered must be at the grounds not later than 9 o'clock on sale day. A commission of 24 per cent. will be charged on all horses sold.

Entries close March 10th, 1917. If you don't want to stand by your agreement as to entries, don't list your horses for this sale.

For any further information, write or phone the Sec., Alex Cameron, Lacombe; Fred McFetridge, Manager of Sale, Lacombe; or C. F. Damron, Bentley.

Women as Bankers

Men Successful Day Women of London

In a typically published government scheme for a British trade school occurred the fact that in the past few years women have taken a share in purely clerical work. The Federation of Women Workers, however, should not be confined to clerical work, and brings on the following facts:

A woman has been appointed as manager of a branch of the London City and Midland Bank. Others are being trained for similar posts.

At the exams following the Oldham lectures on banking at King's College four of the 25 candidates gained over 80 per cent. of marks were women.

One, Miss Rose Kingston, of the head office of the London and South Western Bank, gained the first place with a mark of 90 per cent. from the examiner, Sir John Paget. Seven women from the bank bank gained prizes or certificates.

Splendid Record Of British Unity

Tank Armored Cars from Caucasus to Dobruja, and Help the Russians

Renter's Agency gave some details of the work of the British tank armored cars which have been operating with the Russian army in the Caucasus and Dobruja. Probably no unit of the British forces has had more varied experience than those that fell to the devoted men who, coming from all parts of the British Empire, have after being detached for months in the Arctic, crossed European Russia, and after performing the remarkable feat of crossing the appalling "roads" of the Caucasus and doing good work against the Tusha there, have now been sent to Dobruja to fight the Russo-Rumanian armies in the Dobruja.

In addition to the military value of their work, their presence has been productive of great good, particularly in the remote parts of their field of action. They have been received everywhere with open arms by our Russian allies, while several of the officers and men have been decorated by the Czar.

After their first encounter with the Tusha, the Grand Duke Nicholas sent to Commander Lockyer-Lampson, a special telegram of congratulation and best wishes for the future, while Major-General Nanchukoff also telegraphed expressing his deepest admiration for the work of the British tank armored cars. The memory of his co-operation with the British tank armored cars will always remain with him.

Pending the arrival of the armored cars from the Kola Peninsula, an officer was dispatched to Tula and Ekaterinburg to report on the conditions, and after conferences at Petrograd orders were given for the squadron to leave immediately for the Caucasian front. After their winter in the Arctic the men were well equipped and in order to insure a punctual start two days and nights were spent in necessary repairs, and overhauls.

Early one morning the squadron left Vladivostok for Makhach, near Tiflis, and reached that place in excellent order. The cars were urgently needed to inspect roads beyond Erzerum, and in order to insure the return of the enemy had left open.

The difficult of the journey were enormous, having to be made as it was, along winding, precipitous, and ill-lit tracks, the only avenue of escape, the great snow-covered mountains, a hundred miles was met a constant procession of ancient carts, heavy loads of goods, and caravans of weary travelers. With characteristic "British" these were made good by the use of the "British" method of "pushing" these carts, and every armored car of the Kars eighteen hours before the scheduled time.

The dramatic work had just been finished by the officers. "Oh, well, the matter philosophically, the doctor has ordered me to give up rich things, anyhow."

Wealth of Western Provinces

Grain, Live Stock and Dairy Products

The Winnipeg Free Press, in an exhaustive tabulation of market returns for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for 1919, says that the value of the grain crop of the three provinces totaled $23,010,000 for 1919, as against $22,010,000 for 1918, and $22,010,000 for 1917. The value of the grain crop of the three provinces for 1919 is $23,010,000, as against $22,010,000 for 1918, and $22,010,000 for 1917. It is stated that 97,000,000 bushels of wheat has passed Winnipeg of the 1919 crop. Oats, barley and flax in the remainder of the field of action. They have been received everywhere with open arms by our Russian allies, while several of the officers and men have been decorated by the Czar.

Fruit Growing In British Columbia

Has Become World Famous for the Quality of Fruit Grown

Canada's Pacific province of British Columbia is famous all over the world for the fruit that is raised there. Although the industry is of comparatively recent origin, it has, within the last two or three years, made very rapid strides. The value of the fruit crop of 1919 was approximately $2,500,000, the value of the 1918 crop was about $1,700,000. One of the best known districts in which fruit is raised is the Okanagan Valley. The total output of this district during 1919 has been about 2,000 carloads of fruit, in addition to 1,000 carloads of vegetables. This produce goes principally to the prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but at the same time a considerable trade is being developed with Australia, South Africa and Great Britain. Government exhibits from the province secured the gold medal of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, England—the blue ribbon of fruit growing—for eight consecutive years, against all comers.

It is stated that 97,000,000 bushels of wheat has passed Winnipeg of the 1919 crop. Oats, barley and flax in the remainder of the field of action. They have been received everywhere with open arms by our Russian allies, while several of the officers and men have been decorated by the Czar.

The Highway Of Ancient Rome

Ancient People Knew the Value of Good Roads

"The capitals of Syria and Egypt held a still superior rank in the empire. Antioch and Alexandria looked down with disdain on a crowd of dependent cities." All these cities were connected with each other and with the capital by the public highways which, issuing from the Forum of Rome, traversed Italy, pervaded the provinces and were terminated only by the frontiers of Empire. The public roads were generally divided by milestones and ran in a direct line from one city to another and with very little respect either of nature or of private property. Mountains were perforated and bold arches thrown over the broadest and most rapid streams. Houses were everywhere erected at a distance only of five or six miles; each of them was constantly provided with forty horses and by the help of relays, it was easy to travel a hundred miles in a day along the Roman roads." Gibbon.

There is nothing regular in the life of the Roman Empire, and they are as pleasant to take as sugar, as that children will refuse them. In some cases, they cause vomiting through their action in an unseasoned stomach, but this is only a manifestation of their cleaning power, no indication that they are harmful. They can be thoroughly depended upon to clear all worms from the system.

We study and admire the machinery invented by man, and too often overlook and neglect that most marvellous machine—the human body.

To understand and take care of the heart, lungs and liver; the arteries and veins, the skin, the teeth, the eyes and all the intricate machinery of the body, is no small task.

But, unlike any other machine, the body replaces its own wear and waste, and, consequently, the most attention required in that which has to do with the organs of digestion and excretion.

So long as proper food is supplied for nourishment and the liver, kidneys and bowels are regular in their work of eliminating poisonous waste matter from the system, the greatest majority of human ills are avoided.

In this connection Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are appreciated on account of their promptness and efficiency in arousing the action of these filtering and excretory organs, and thereby removing such disorders as liver complaint, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, kidney disease and backache. With these organs in healthful action there is no such thing as Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and rheumatism.

Rural London
There are 1400 acres of land, apart from public gardens lying idle in London, says the superintendent of the Vacant Land Cultivation Society.

Even more surprising to the majority of Londoners, however, may be information that there are still over 3,000 acres within the metropolitan area used as farm land. Although London boasts sixteen hundred farms—most of them in Woolwich—and in pre-war times had at least 300 acres devoted to wheat growing. It has also at least one windmill still in use, though electricity has supplanted its motive power.
